To the Democratic Republic of Algeria,

To optimize Algeria's engagement with the Universal Periodic Review process, we put forth the subsequent suggestions as a refined and insightful approach.

The array of recommendations presented – namely, 'supported,' 'noted,' and 'rejected' – were meticulously crafted, taking into account the complex tapestry of Algerian public desires, necessities, cultural nuances, and religious sensibilities. By privileging the voices of the Algerian populace, our delineation was meticulously molded through direct engagement and rigorous surveys within the vibrant Algerian civil society.

The selected recommendations are free from all politicized, spurious contentions and inaccurate suppositions stemming from disinformation or misinformation has been emphasized. This approach involves meticulously scrutinizing the ramifications of international treaties before subjecting Algerian civil society and ensuing generations to external jurisdiction. Furthermore, the commendation of Chile's anti-discrimination proposal, with its comprehensive nature and framework, fosters an environment conducive to safeguarding the rights of Algerians, irrespective of gender, religious affiliation, or orientation, while simultaneously ensuring cultural adaptability and dexterity.

Sincerely,
Farida Bouattoura
